Join Our Ministry!

If the idea of guiding children ages 10 through 16 toward Christ and the right way of living sounds appealing, consider becoming Houseparents on our main campus in Paragould. Successful candidates are faithful members of the churches of Christ. The housemother is hired to provide a routine that teaches children how to live in and trust a structured family environment. The housemother is part of a professional team including eight other housemothers. The housefather provides spiritual leadership in the home while supporting his wife's ministry. He can maintain employment off campus or may be eligible for employment on campus, if positions are available. The housemother position offers training, personal support, competitive salary, health insurance, 401K, 12 weeks time off per year with accommodations and living expenses. To learn more about the housemother position, contact Paul Schandavel, Director of Child and Family Services, by email at pauls@childrenshomes.org or phone at 870.236.0682.

My Good Friend, Mr. Luna: Shining Example of Contentment

Do you have those people in your life who aren't family, but they might as well be family because of how special your relationship is with them? Thanks to the ministry at Children's Homes, Inc., I have been blessed with many of those people. They love you like you were one of their own, and you love them back in the same way.

I traveled to Franklin, Tenn., in April for a rare visit with my dear friend James Luna and to help him celebrate his 97th birthday. I say it was a rare visit because I had not been able to see him for quite some time due to the pandemic.

My friendship with Mr. Luna goes back to his days living in Memphis, Tenn. He was a veteran, a retired school teacher, widower and avid supporter of this ministry.

I actually came to know of him before I ever had the privilege to meet him. Mr. Luna was (and still is) a donor to Children's Homes, Inc. However, the story behind his faithful support is one that both saddens and inspires.

There was a young boy named David. He was a vibrant boy like most. David loved to participate in our annual Change for Children campaign. His mother recently told me about the Sunday they were supposed to turn in their coinbanks at church. They got to church when David realized he had forgotten his coinbank. He told her they had to go home so he could get it. After services, they made the mad dash home and back to the church building so David could get his coinbank turned in that day.

Sadly in May of 1994, David was killed in a tragic automobile accident just a few months short of his 7th birthday.

When I started working here in March of 2000, there was a framed picture hanging in the lobby of our administration building. It contained that year's Change for Children poster alongside a small picture of young boy. Across the bottom was the name "David Farra Dutton" and the years of his life. On the back of the picture were the signatures of the kids and teachers from his Bible class at church. My first question was "Who was David?" That's when I first heard the name James Luna. David was his grandson.

Months later, I had the privilege to meet Mr. Luna at one of our Advisory Council meetings in Memphis. You've heard of love at first sight. Well, this was one of those moments. He immediately felt like a grandfather to me. From that day forward, he welcomed me and my family into his extraordinary life. As the years passed, I found myself going to Memphis as often as I could to see him. Those trips were always an adventure.

One of Mr. Luna's passions was cooking for people. When he was still able to drive, he'd make runs to local stores getting fruits and vegetables. He'd go home to cook soup and a long list of other items. He'd load the meals in his car and head out to bless the lives of others. My feet sat at his table more than once enjoying his food.

As his health waned and he wasn't able to get around as easily, he'd still take food to people. He'd let them know he was on his way. Soon, there would be a honk in the driveway signaling someone to come out and get their food.

Eventually, he got to the point where he couldn't drive any longer. That's where I became a chauffeur more than once on his meal delivery trips. We would load the meals in my vehicle and away we would go.

While there were many things I grew to love and appreciate about Mr. Luna, I think the one that was most impressive was his ability to be content no matter the circumstances. He never complained as his mobility deteriorated. He just found a new way to accomplish his goals.

The time did eventually come when he had to move from his home into an assisted-living environment. He took the move in stride. When I had my first visit with him in his new home, I was greeted with "this is the best place ever. They take such good care of me."

As we roamed around the facility, I was astonished at how quickly he learned the names of everyone. It was as if he had known each one of them his entire life. And, everyone seemed to feel the same way about him.

I would go over to eat breakfast or lunch with him. While in the dining room, he'd show me off to all his new friends just as a grandfather does with their grandchildren. And, interjected into every single conversation was the fact that I worked at Children's Homes, Inc. He was our very own public relations person on the street wherever he went.

Mr. Luna would move to another assisted-living facility down the road before eventually moving to a facility in the Nashville, Tenn., area, which was closer to his family.

With each move, the drill was the same. He quickly got know everyone, and not just their names. He dug as deep into their lives as permitted. And, he remembered every detail.

Pictured is a plaque that displays the current Change for Children poster along with a photo of David, James Luna's grandson who died tragically in 1994.

Building a Special Bond

Mirrors are useful things. They provide us with an opportunity to examine our reflections and clean things up where we need to. Got messy hair? Spinach in your teeth? No problem. By using the mirror, we can spot these issues and correct them.

For physical appearance, mirrors will do the trick every time. What to do about behavior though? There are not enough mirrors in the world to reflect back to us our every move and decision.

In our weekly Equine Therapy sessions, our children in care encounter just such a mirror in our horses.

"Horses reflect the kid," Director of Family Services Paul Schandavel said. "If the kid treats the horse with kindness, the horse shows kindness. This encourages a bond with the horse and it's a safe way to forge relationships."

One of the stronger relationships forged recently has been between Allison and longtime equine program horse, Checkers.

Allison chose Checkers after seeing a picture of him in the equine classroom. Brian Rankin, equine program instructor, OK'd the match and the relationship was off and running.

"At first he was kind of crazy," Allison said. "He would nip at me and play around and stuff. But now he's gotten calmer. It took a few months to develop a connection. I feel like he's more trusting. He'll give me hooves now (during grooming). He doesn't bite at me anymore. He's just calmer now than he was before."

Brian, who matches horse and child based on their personalities, has been very pleased with the results of this particular pairing.

"After about three months, they were connected," Brian said. "They can accomplish about anything. Checkers is pretty easy to attach to. If you have a playful attitude, especially. If you're down to business and not very patient, then he's probably not the horse for you. That's why we try to match up personalities."

The connection has resulted in a means of communication that provides Allison a great level of comfort.

"She connects real well with the horses. Usually, she goes back there and just talks," Brian said. "She has a conversation, and then will tell you what the horse says. It's how she's feeling. But that's what these horses do. They see themselves in these horses. That's the point we want to get to. Sometimes the kids reject what they see, but these horses will mirror what the kid feels, the emotions that are involved."

"It helps me because it's hard for me to talk to regular people and express what I need to when there's something I really need to talk about," Allison said. "I feel like people judge me. So it's easier for me to talk to Checkers because he isn't arguing with me or saying rude stuff. And I don't think he gossips about me to his other friends."

Besides the therapeutic one-sided conversations, Allison uses Checkers a gauge for her own mood and behavior. As part of the course, each child-horse pair goes through exercises designed to support communication and team work. It requires a strong connection to complete the tasks at hand.

"He performs well for the most part," Allison said. "But if I'm having a bad day, I guess he reads my body language and then doesn't do so well. When I'm having a bad day and I see he's acting up, I try to calm down because I don't want that to affect our relationship."

"If a kid comes in and they're mad, the horse is going to feel that and probably isn't going to be very cooperative because it's mad, too," Brian said. "But when they're able to come in and block all of that out and focus on the horse and the here and now, then it works out better. It helps them to be able to work with people. We say, 'Put that into real life. Could you control how this horse was behaving? Maybe not. But you have to work with that. So how do you work with that horse with the way he's behaving?' ... It helps with relationship building. It helps with accomplishing goals. It helps them be themselves because the horses reflect. When they describe these animals, a lot of times they're describing themselves. Sometimes they don't realize they're describing themselves, and we have to point it out."

One other way the horse acts as a mirror is by providing an outlet for the child to model proper behaviors, in some cases behavior they haven't themselves experienced.

Allison walks Checkers into the arena at the Smith Farm.

"Allison does excellent, but she doesn't get proud of herself because no one else has gotten proud of her and no one else has given her praise," Brian said. "That's one thing we try to do. If the horse does something you want him to do, tell him. Give him praise. So when they have kids, they do it right. They see what right is. We're here to show them that you can do things the right way."

Brian said he hopes if a child takes nothing else from the course that they learn that they can be successful in life.

"We all have hardships but we can overcome those problems and still be successful," he said.

The equine program is always on the lookout for the next Checkers. We have many horses that are advanced in age and will have to be replaced eventually. If you are interested in donating a good-natured, gentle horse between 5 and 15 years old, please contact Gary Cupp at gary.cupp@childrenshomes.org.

The new main building at The Ridge Retreat and Adventure Center just after daylight recently.

A New Day At The Ridge

The year of 2020 will be remembered by many a would-be camper as "The Year That Wasn't" at The Ridge Retreat and Adventure Center.

Construction was wrapping up on the new main building and expectations were sky high for the summer sessions. Of course, a few short months later, sessions were cancelled because of COVID-19.

What do you do when you have a beautiful new building that no one can utilize yet?

In this case, we doubled down on improvements. In addition to the new main building, we built eight new small cabins, all equipped with bathrooms and showers. The stage from the old amphitheater area has been relocated to the area between the new cabins and new main building and rests at the end of a beautiful new pavilion.

One of the more bittersweet sides to the

Stretching Your IRAs With A Charitable Twist

On December 20, 2019, President Trump signed the “Setting Every Community Up for Retirement Enhancement Act” (also known as the SECURE Act), which provided sweeping changes to tax-deferred retirement plans. Several of the changes enhanced individuals’ abilities to save for retirement. These include:

- Increasing the age for taking required minimum distributions (RMD) from traditional IRAs and 401K plans to 72.
- Removing the age limit for contributions to IRAs;
- Enabling more part-time employees to participate in 401K plans.
- Raising the cap for contributions to 401K plans to 15 percent after the first year of employment.
- Several provisions that assist small businesses in offering retirement plans.

The SECURE Act, however, mostly eliminated a well-favored strategy for making the IRA’s benefits last over the life expectancy of heirs. Commonly known as the Stretch IRA, this provision allowed heirs other than the IRA owner’s spouse to receive their inherited IRA in the form of required minimum distributions over their life expectancy. As a consequence, heirs only paid income taxes based on lower distribution amounts from the IRA and also benefited from the tax-deferred growth of the IRA. This strategy was especially helpful for spendthrift heirs and those who lack money management skills.

Under the SECURE Act, if the original IRA owner died on or after January 1, 2020, beneficiaries must withdraw all assets from the plan by December 31 of the 10th year following the IRA owner’s death. Exceptions to this rule include the surviving spouse, a disabled or chronically ill beneficiary, minors or beneficiaries who are not more than 10 years younger than the retirement plan owner. All other heirs need to withdraw the IRA assets within the 10-year period and pay ordinary income taxes for those distributions.

Those with modest IRA accounts may not be troubled by the 10-year distribution rule and its associated taxes, especially if their heirs have decent money management skills. But those with significant IRA holdings may be troubled by the accelerated distribution and taxation of the IRAs especially if their heirs are not ready to receive a large inheritance due to youth, financial immaturity, “affluenza,” bad spending habits or chemical addictions. Their accelerated inheritance of IRA assets is also not protected from divorce, creditors, lawsuits and bankruptcy.

There is one way to truly stretch one’s IRA for the lifetime of heirs or a term of 20 years or a combination thereof. It also happens to provide a deferred benefit to your favorite causes. It is called the Testamentary Charitable Remainder Trust (TCRT, for short).

Here’s how it works: Upon the IRA owner’s death, the IRA assets fund a TCRT that will distribute either a fixed percentage of trust assets or a fixed amount (the minimum is 5 percent trust assets) to the IRA owner’s beneficiaries for a selected trust term, which could be the remaining lives of the beneficiaries. Beneficiaries pay taxes as they receive the TRCT distributions during the trust term. At the end of the trust term, the remaining assets in the trust are distributed to one or more charities.

There are several benefits to this arrangement:

- Because the trust is tax-exempt, no ordinary income tax is triggered when the entire retirement plan balance is transferred to the TRCT upon the IRA owner’s death.
- Heirs who are named as income beneficiaries of the TCRT will get an income stream for their lives or a term of years. This supplementary retirement income source is a good option for heirs with money management problems.
- Trust assets are invested in a tax-free environment, enabling them to grow and provide greater benefits to income beneficiaries in the future.
- Assets in the trust are protected from divorce, creditors, bankruptcy and litigation.

SANDERS, ERIE ELLEN

In the past few months, William and Vacle Olive, whose names adorn our Olive Ranch near Walcott, have celebrated two major milestones. Back in January, the couple celebrated an astonishing 80 years of marriage. In April, Mr. Olive celebrated his 100th birthday. We wish this sweet couple many more milestones together.

Virus slowing down, UPCs picking up

The number of COVID cases has started to decline. The shelves in the stores are beginning to show signs of an abundance of products. For this, we are thankful!

The family homes at Children's Homes are seeing signs of "normalcy." Faces of the children, the house parents and the staff are brighter.

We are still collecting the UPC bar scanning codes from Best Choice products (except fluid milk) so look for them in stores that carry that brand. They are worth three cents each. As of April 15, 2021, we have received 12,000 Best Choice UPCs — worth $360. Please encourage others to help in this project.

— Barbara Petty

By the time he moved to his current home, he was pretty much wheelchair-bound. Did this stop him from being himself? Absolutely not! While more difficult to get around, he never changed who he was. On my visits to him in Nashville, we'd go through the same steps of showing me off to everyone. There was always a stop by the laundry room for him to move his clothes from the washer to the dryer. Then we were off to mingle.

On one visit, my family was able to go with me. As we were preparing to leave, Mr. Luna had one more thing for us to do. We headed off to the memory care unit for those who were suffering with dementia and Alzheimer's. We learned that he would wheel himself to the unit on a regular basis to sing for the residents. While they couldn't remember their own names at times, they could remember the words to "How Great Thou Art" or "The Star-Spangled Banner." My entire family watched in amazement as a man who was not going to be defined by his circumstances worked to bless others.

Fast forward to just a few weeks ago when I was able to visit with Mr. Luna again. He is weaker physically, but his spirit for life has not changed one bit. He is still the embodiment of Phil. 4:11, which says "Not that I speak in respect of want: for I have learned, in whatsoever state I am, therewith to be content."

During our visit, we reminisced, prayed together, sang together and shared conversations about life and our futures. While I went to surprise him on his birthday, I was the one who walked away most blessed.

I believe God placed James Luna in my path for a reason. I've learned that God can still be praised in the storms of life and that I can still serve His people in what would seem to be the most burdensome of circumstances. And, through it all, I can be content because I know who holds the future.

The donor's estate receives a charitable estate tax deduction that can be used to offset state and federal estate taxes.

- The IRA owner leaves a charitable legacy at the end of the trust term, after the trust has provided for heirs.
- The strategy also helps to build charitable character in heirs.

For illustration purposes, let's suppose there's a retired physician named Dr. Laura Brown who has accumulated $1 million in her IRA. She also has a 40-year-old son named Sam. Dr. Brown consulted her attorney and financial advisor and made the necessary arrangements in her will and IRA beneficiary designation forms, so that when she died the remaining IRA assets funded a 5 percent TCRT with Sam as income beneficiary for his life and her hospital and local food bank are the remainder beneficiaries. In the first year after her death, Sam receives $50,000 from the trust. Every year thereafter, he receives 5% of the trust net assets valued annually. If the trust's investments perform well, the trust assets grow and the value of Sam's distribution grows as well. In the years that the investments decline in value, the value of Sam's distribution declines in value as well. Let's assume the trust on average grows by 5% each year net of investment and trust administration fees, Sam's income tax bracket is 24% and that he lives to a ripe old age of 89. By the end of the trust term, he would have received around $1.9M in cumulative after-tax income. At the end of his life, the remaining trust assets, which are estimated to be $1M in value, will be split between the late Dr. Brown's hospital and local food bank. This looks like a remarkably balanced plan for family and charity.

The TCRT is not for everyone and should only be implemented after thorough consultation with one's estate planning attorney and financial advisor. There are also IRS rules that need to be adhered to during the creation and maintenance of the TCRT that necessitate the use of professionals with expertise in tax-exempt trusts. The transfer of the IRA assets to a TCRT is also irrevocable; once they are in the TCRT, they generally cannot be taken back. Nevertheless, the TCRT is worth looking into if one is interested in the potential of stretching IRAs for the benefit of heirs and also leaving a meaningful charitable legacy.
